

SureSet rebrand to StoneSet

Following a successful launch of the SureSet resin bound paving system in Australia; the company has recently reviewed the current and long term strategy for the business. The initial goals have been met with the appointment of approved installers enabling SureSet's coverage to reach the whole of Australia. The process of appointing local approved installers to all areas of the country continues, but the product can now be installed by a fully trained installer anywhere in Australia.

With this network of installers now established, the attention has now turned to product development and in particular the sourcing of Australian stone in all regions. The demand for locally sourced stone has always been high, so the technical department is now actively seeking new suppliers in all areas of the country, the most recent addition being Exmouth Pink sourced in WA and available in 10mm and 14mm sizes.

SureSet see the ability to be able to supply any stone source required in a permeable, resin bound paving mix, as key to the products attraction and vital selling point. Our long term commitment is to not only source local stone, but to process those not currently available and with this in mind the decision was made to adapt the current company name from SureSet to StoneSet as recognition to our commitment to the ongoing development and addition to all stone sources to our range.

StoneSet foresees an ongoing commitment to working within the stone industry and community to offer the use of the attractive appearance of all rocks and gravel as part of modern architecture and design in any urban and rural environments whilst being able to offer it in conjunction with environmentally considerate, sustainable projects where drainage is an issue and permeable paving is required.

All StoneSet products, although sold and marketed under the StoneSet name will continue to use the SureSet technologies of crystal clear resin binding together natural stone, all covered by a 10 year guarantee, ensuring exceptional standards of installation and durability. StoneSet is still associated with SureSet UK Ltd and an ongoing partnership with the UK based company will continue for the development of the product and resin technology.

StoneSet has a range of permeable resin bound paving suitable for tree surrounds, driveways, pathways and feature areas. It is produced with a unique blend of resin which is UV stable, so will not break up or discolour from sunlight exposure and is 100 times more flexible than concrete, so is resistant to cracking. Depending on traffic loads StoneSet can be installed directly onto a permeable road based or compacted gravel base or can even go over existing concrete and asphalt surfaces.
